Black tea

Black tea comes in an almost infinite range of varieties, grades and flavours. The shape of the leaves, the time they are plucked and the particular way they are processed give each tea its unique taste; the soil and climate add to its individual character. Our selected Ronnefeldt teas owe their exquisite taste to special climate conditions and to sophisticated cultivation and production methods. Ronnefeldt sources its black tea from cultivation regions around the world. The best-known are in India (Darjeeling and Assam), Sri Lanka (Ceylon) and China.

Oolong tea

Oolong is a partly oxidised tea that is traditionally grown on the island of Taiwan – formerly called Formosa – among other places. Oolong means ‘black dragon’ or ‘snake’, a reference to the characteristic shape of the leaves. After plucking, the tea leaves are laid out in the sun to wither. A special processing method ensures that the leaves only oxidise from the edge inwards. The tea master decides how long this process should last. In terms of taste, a partly oxidised oolong lies somewhere between green tea and black tea and has its own unique flavour profile: fruity, mellow and highly aromatic. The nutty, woody notes of black oolong teas make them most desired among tea connoisseurs. If the tea only oxidises for a short period of time, the oolong is referred to as ‘lightly oxidised’ and more closely resembles green tea.

Green tea

Green tea is the origin of all teas and, depending on where it is grown, produces a delightfully delicate, fruity or tart variation. This unoxidised tea has been enjoyed in China for over 4,000 years. From here, green tea went on to fascinate Japan and is today produced in other parts of the world, too. Originally, the freshly plucked tea leaves were simply placed straight into a cup and have been poured with hot water. The quality of our exquisite green tea comfortably equals freshly plucked tea.

Matcha & Asia Collection

Matcha ('mat' = powdered, 'cha' = tea) is green tea that has been ground to a very fine powder and is traditionally used in the Japanese tea ceremony. Buddhist monks were already making matcha as a meditation drink over 800 years ago. To prepare the drink, water is poured over the powder and the mixture is stirred with a bamboo whisk. The result: a uniquely creamy, full-bodied green tea.

This traditional tea variety, with its vibrant green colour, is currently being rediscovered and appreciated by increasing numbers of tea connoisseurs. Whether prepared in the traditional way or served as matcha latte – it is always an exceptional and refined delight.

White tea

White tea owes its name to the fine white hairs on the underside of the leaves as well as to the pale colour of the infusion. It is so delicate and refined that, according to one story, it was created for emperors. Processing requires a great deal of care and experience, so everything is done purely by hand. This starts with the selection of the leaves to be plucked, as only the newest growth is suitable. The two freshest leaves and a bud are most carefully transformed by hand into a very delicate, aromatic speciality. Left to wither naturally in the open air, the moisture is slowly extracted from the tea. What follows is a special form of solar drying that brings out the uniquely mild, sweet flavour.

Herbal infusion

To be precise, the term 'tea' is exclusively reserved for black and green teas. That means herbal tea is actually a 'herbal infusion', and fruit tea is a 'fruit infusion' made from dried flower petals, leaves or other parts of a plant. Discover our range of single-herb infusions: delicious and aromatic! Or try one of our finely composed and carefully selected herbal blends that have been imaginatively put together.

Rooibos

Rooibos is the national drink of South Africa and is made from the needle-shaped leaves of the red bush. The plant grows wild in the Cederberg mountains of South Africa. Cultivation and commercial planting only began around 100 years ago. Oxidation gives rooibos its mild but intense flavour and its red colour. Rooibos does not contain caffeine and is low in tannins but high in minerals, meaning it is also suitable for children. Our rooibos blends show how versatile the dried needles can be: from lively and fresh to fruity and sweet.

Food

Pure, with milk or sweetened – the perfect tea is a matter of taste. Our recommendations: green teas are usually enjoyed without sugar, while refined light teas such as Darjeeling First Flush can take a small amount of white sugar or white candy sugar. Brown candy sugar would not go amiss in an Assam or a strong, dark blend. We have put together a selection to go with our assortment of teas.

General Terms & Conditions for the world of hospitality

Our deliveries shall be carried out exclusively pursuant to these general terms and conditions of delivery and payment, which are acknowledged by the purchaser at the time of placing the order, the confirmation of the order or, at the latest, at the time of acceptance of the goods by the customer. They shall apply to the entire business relationship. Deviating conditions of purchase for the customer are only binding on us if they have been expressly acknowledged in writing by us. The invalidity of individual provisions does not affect the validity of the remaining terms and conditions.

1. Orders

Orders will only be binding on us once they have been accepted by way of delivery, invoicing or by the written confirmation of the order. Offers and prices stated by us are not binding and are without obligation until the goods have been invoiced.

2. Prices

The prices in effect on the day of delivery shall apply plus the statutory Value Added Tax in effect at the respective time. The prices in effect on the day of delivery will be calculated on the basis of the conditions agreed upon. The standard prices for our tea varieties (plus VAT) are based on the minimum purchasing quantity of the stipulated sales units. We reserve the right to correct any printing errors in the price list.

3. Delivery and Shipping

Where the net invoiced amount is € 200 or less, deliveries are charged a postage and packaging fee of € 6.90 for each delivery up to 20 kg. Delivery including packaging is free for orders of more than € 200. As of November 1, 2013 the following terms & conditions apply to orders: we deliver free of charge, including packaging, if you order at least 5 sales units of tea. For orders of less than 5 sales units of tea, we charge a flat shipping rate of € 6.90 per package up to a maximum of 30 kg. In the case of first-time orders, the first delivery will be made on prepayment basis. Where delivery is made by post, postage fees will be borne by the party placing the order. The amount of the invoice and the value of the order always relates to orders within the range of products available and capable of being delivered at any one time. We are entitled to make appropriate alterations to such ordered quantities which do not correspond to full packaging units in accordance with the product list. Delivery dates are only binding if expressly confirmed in writing by us. The goods will generally be shipped within three days in the ordinary course of business. The method of shipment and the shipping company is our choice and responsibility. The ability to deliver presupposes that we have also been supplied with goods in and of a sufficient quantity and quality. In the event of an Act of God, or any other event the fault of which cannot be attributed to us, which hinder, prevent or make delivery or shipping impossible, entitles us – at our option – to cancel or postpone the delivery until the impediment has been eliminated. We reserve the right to make partial deliveries and deliveries of tea varieties of equivalent quality. Delays in delivery do not give rise to any compensation for damages. Deliveries by the seller are made in accordance with Incoterms 2000.

4. Transport Risks

The goods are delivered by way of shipment at the risk of the recipient. In the event of breakage, damage and theft during the course of shipment, we will only effect compensation if the particular loss was officially determined by the carrier. The weights and number of units ascertained at the time of dispatch of the goods are definitive. The purchaser bears the risk of all returned goods during the return shipment. Transport damage and incomplete deliveries must be reported to the carrier without delay.

5. Formal Complaints and Warranties

Complaints concerning the goods delivered must be reported to us immediately. Complaints are only effective if received by us no later than 8 days subsequent to receipt of the goods. Returned goods will only be accepted in accordance with an express agreement with us and only by way of prepaid shipment. Defects in respect of a part of a delivery do not entitle the purchaser to object to the entire delivery. In the event of valid defects, the purchaser is only entitled to demand substitute delivery. In the event the replacement delivery is deficient for the second time, the purchaser is entitled to abate the purchase price or cancel the contract. Irrespective of the legal reason, any other claims, especially the assertion of a claim based on consequential loss caused by defect, negligent misfeasance or any other legal reasons, are excluded unless we, our legal / statutory representatives or persons employed to perform an obligation are charged with gross negligence (intent or gross fault), or in the event of negligent infringement of major contractual obligations which would jeopardise the contract purpose, in the event of the assumption of a guarantee for the condition of the goods, in the event of malicious non-disclosure of a defect or in the event of the occurrence of damage due to injury to life, limb or health of a person.

6. Terms of Payment

Our invoices are due and payable net cash within 8 days with a 2% cash discount, or within 30 days with no deductions. If the invoice shows an amount from which the cash discount has already been deducted, the invoice amount is deemed to be the gross invoice amount without the cash discount until the payment has been made in full. The amount of Value Added Tax will then be increased accordingly. Our sales staff are not authorized to collect. Furthermore, they are only authorized to accept orders which comply with the principles of our company policy. They are not authorized to enter into contracts which deviate from these principles or from these General Terms and Conditions of Sale, nor are they authorized to acknowledge the customer's general terms and conditions and payment conditions. If there are grounds for doubt on the ability of the purchaser to meet financial obligations or his credit worthiness or if he is in default, or sells his business, or surrenders it, or ends the business relationship due to reasons that he is responsible for, all our claims become immediately due. In cases of delayed payment, we are entitled to calculate default interest at a rate of 8% above base rate, subject to evidence of further damage resulting from undue delay. The interest is calculated beginning on the due date of payment.

7. Retention of Property

The goods remain our property until payment of all our claims in conjunction with the business relationship is made in full. The purchaser is entitled to dispose of the goods in the ordinary course of business. In the event of a resale, however, any claims against third parties in an amount equal to our own claims are deemed to be assigned to us by way of extended reservation of proprietary rights. Upon demand by us, information concerning a resale to third parties must be forthcoming.

8. General

We are entitled to store, process and transmit customer data relating to the movement of goods and payment transactions in accordance with the German Data Protection Act (Bundesdatenschutzgesetz). The place of jurisdiction and place of performance for all mutual rights and obligations arising from the business relationship is exclusively Frankfurt am Main, Germany. We are nevertheless entitled to assert claims against the customer in any other competent court of law. German law shall govern exclusively to the preclusion of the applicability of the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sales of Goods (CISG). In the event that we are prevented from producing or shipping goods that have already been sold due to a disruption of operations, an Act of God or any other unforeseen circumstances arising from no fault of ours or our suppliers, we are discharged from our obligation to supply the goods. The customer is not entitled to use brands, variety descriptions, etc. outside the identified goods supplied, in particular not in any form of e-business in internet. Insofar as the customer is provided with advertising materials, variety texts etc. the customer is obliged to use these advertising materials solely in connection and with our products.
